

BEAUTY IN NEW INTERIOR OF ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH

Rich Marbles and Decorative Scheme of Black and White Combine With Artistic Lighting to Transform Famous Old Episcopal House of Worship

(Photographs illustrating this article appear at the back page.) The interior of St. Stephen's Protestant Episcopal Church, Tenth street south of Market, completely renovated and dedicated as a memorial to James Magee, a vestryman from 1861 to 1878, is now a place of remarkable beauty.

Mrs. Anna J. Magee so planned the alterations to the church that the interior would harmonize with the marble chapel she installed as a memorial to her father last year. The interior has been virtually redecorated in genuine and imitation white marble. The balconies have been redecorated in black and white, in striking contrast to the other alterations. Mrs. Magee has also had many improvements made in the parish house, including a new switchboard and new radiators, as well as substantial repairs. The chief alterations are manifest at a glance. The south gallery has been cut back to the line of the north gallery, and the ends of both have been artistically treated. The circular windows on either side of the recessed have been bricked up. The walls have been repapered, covered with canvas, and painted to resemble Carrara marble. A new stone baptistry of Champeville marble and glass has taken the place of the old wooden screen inside the front door. All the aisles and the vestibule have been floored with Cassia marble. The west end of the church and vestibule have been wainscoted with Champeville marble.

can be changed in three minutes. Fresh air can now be obtained without drafts and without letting in the noise of the street.

The ceiling of the church has been decorated by a grille-work of beautiful design, and a new grille covers the opening for the echo organ above the chancel.

All the gallery windows have been protected and toned down in color by additional glass on the outside. To give a better setting to the memorial to Maria Gouverneur Mitchell, by St. Gaudens, the memorial of the late Senator Warden, Ludovic Colquhoun Clemon, was transferred to the north side of the vestibule, and the Mitchell memorial itself was moved a few feet further back.

from the recessed and raised about a foot and a half.

The Ducahet Memorial has also been improved by a new setting. All the marble memorials have been cleaned.

A new monument has been added by a bust of James Magee, which has been placed in a tabernacle on the south side of the vestibule, where it balances the bust of his fellow vestryman, Mr. Clemon on the north side. Underneath a tablet has been placed to this effect:

JAMES MAGEE Vestryman 1861-1878 To His Daughter, Anna J. Magee The Church is Indebted For Extensive Alteration and Decorations: November, 1918. I will glorify the house of my glory.

New lanterns of a Gothic design have been hung in the nave and in the transept, under the galleries and in the vestibule. New bracket lanterns of an original pattern have been affixed to the walls. The organ has been decorated, and the front of the galleries has been stenciled. New screens have been placed on either side of the choir. All the woodwork of the galleries and pews has been painted a darker color. An elaborate and costly ventilating system has been installed in the roof whereby the atmosphere of the entire church

The STROUD PIANOLA-PIANO
C. J. HEPPE & SON
Exclusive Representative
Here is the greatest player-piano value in all the world.
And the most popular player-piano in Philadelphia—a Christmas gift beyond comparison.
As a piano, the Stroud contains every quality desired by the most critical musician. Quality in design, workmanship, finish, action and tone.
As a player-piano, the Stroud contains the famous Aeolian-Pianola patents, every one exclusive to the genuine Pianola-Pianos, of which there are but five, all on sale at Heppes.
Two of the Pianola patents alone are worth the price of the Stroud. One gives you the expression of the artist. The other gives you the melody of the composer. They are both in the Stroud.
And although the Stroud has these superior features, it may be purchased for a very nominal amount.
PRICE $700
Settlement may be made in cash, by charge account or through our Rental-Payment Plan whereby all rent may be applied toward the purchase. Your present piano will be taken in exchange at a fair value.
Call, phone or write for full particulars.
